- Highest rates of migration in the world (ranked 4th in the world by the CIA’s World Fact Book). This has repercussions on national identity and cultural content and expressions.
- There is a lack of legislation for the protection of tangible heritage and safeguarding of intangible cultural heritage.
- Several traditional industries and craft forms are in danger of becoming obsolete.
- There is no national culture and heritage oversight mechanism for the formal enabling, coordination and support of Cayman Islands’ overall heritage protection and cultural development.
- There is a perception of insufficient fiscal resources afforded to culture and heritage institutions and initiatives.
- It is difficult to provide empirical evidence that the creative economy can generate income and jobs through creative industries.
- Caymanian heritage resources, products and traditional cultural expressions are sometimes misrepresented through uninformed portrayals at tourist venues.

Policies for protection/improvement of status of artists

- The 2017 National Cultural Policy acknowledges that, “the protection of the rights of the artist to explore the imagination and ability to produce creative work requires a supportive and enabling environment, which has not been formalised in the Cayman Islands. As such, the policy outlines seven strategic aims for its policy direction on promotion of the status of the artist and freedom of cultural expression.
- Enshrine the rights of freedom of cultural expression in keeping with the Constitution and laws of the Cayman Islands
- Generate and promulgate a statement on the Status of the Artist
- Create a national database of Artists and cultural heritage workers in the Cayman Islands and the diaspora.
- Provide assistance to Artists to enable their potential access to social services, healthcare and training opportunities with the appropriate Government agencies.
- Review intellectual property rights and copyright legislation to ensure protection of those rights of the Artist.
- Encourage greater scope for international artistic exchange, including Caymanian artists’ tenures, residencies and tours in the international arena, and hosting visiting artists locally.
- Heightening public awareness and appreciation of the contributions artists make to society.
